THANK YOU SO MUCH TO ALL THE PEOPLE WHO PARTICIPATED ON THE SUPERVILLAIN CONTEST, IT MADE ME SO HAPPY!

CHOOSING THE WINNERS HAS BEEN ONE OF THE MOST DIFFICULT DECISIONS I'VE EVER HAD TO MAKE.

I'VE RECEIVED HUNDREDS OF ENTRIES (LITERALLY) AND I DO LOVE EVERY SINGLE ONE!!!

I REALLY DO, ALL YOUR VILLAINS ARE ABSOLUTELY AWESOME!

WITHOUT FURTHER ADO...

LET'S SEE THE WINNERS!

4TH PLACE

TREAT BY EMMYYELLOWBLUE

Treat

(Real name: Diana Hastings)

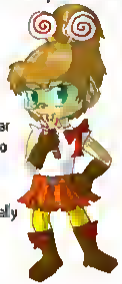
The 7-year old daughter of a pair of scientists. A child prodigy, especially in the field of chemistry, Treat's brain is constantly at work, whether it be with complex math problems, new chemical formulas or something else. As a result, her brain burns an abnormal amount of energy, adding to an already super-human metabolism. Hence her love for sweet food – she essentially needs it to function normally.

With the help of a super-serum, she gained the power to make herself stronger and faster by eating sweet food. She also uses weaponized candy that she invented herself.

The visor is one of her father's inventions that she "borrowed".

It works as a scanner, giving her a clear picture of her surroundings and how to use them to her advantage.

The ribbon on her shoulder doesn't really fill a function – She thinks it looks cute and that assymmetry is fashionable.



Colors

Eyes Hair Skin

Visor Gloves & Boots

Ribbons

Dress

Meant to look like candy corn

Her belt has two pouches in the back. The left one has regular candy and the right one has weaponized candy.

Her arsenal includes:

Balloon Gum

She can't fly, so she uses this gum to safely descend or ascend tall structures or to keep herself suspended in the air.

Strawberry-flavor

Taffy Glue

An extremely sticky taffy that traps her opponents.

Lemon butter-scotch-flavor

Candy Cane Beretta

Lets her fire her weaponized candy from a distance.

Semi-edible. She can't exactly eat it, but it still tastes like peppermint, so she often licks it.

Peppermint Smoke Pellets

Smoke pellets to daze and confuse her opponents.

Smells like peppermint.

Shock'o Baby

Modeled after the Japanese candy Choco Baby, the chocolate pellets turn soft on impact and produce a stunning electric shock.

Do not eat these.

Treat is the ultimate example of why intelligence doesn't equal maturity. While she's extremely intelligent and strategic for her age and normally polite and cheery, she's an impatient and short-tempered brat. She's not above throwing huge temper tantrums when things don't go her way, and she has the vocabulary you'd expect from a 7-year old. She also hates it when people look down on her, talk down to her and don't take her seriously.

She also didn't have the foresight of making herself immune to her own weapons, meaning she can indeed get hoisted by her own petard

Her supervillainy partly stems from being a bratty kid, partly from craving attention and partly from feeling bored. Her intelligence alienates her from her peers, adults don't take her intellect seriously and her parents are too busy with their research fairly often. Treat therefore feels like she doesn't get the kind of stimuli and attention that she needs/deserves

She also sees her villainy as a bit of a game and might not fully understand the consequences of her actions.

The best way of defeating her is to rob her of her candy arsenal and power-up food - Basically, to steal her belt. Due to both her body and her brain burning so much energy already, in combination with her already superhuman metabolism and tantrum tendencies, she loses a lot of energy extremely fast. When exhausted enough, her strength and speed go back to normal, making her a normal kid again.

She won't make it easy, but a good strategy is using her short temper and short-sightedness in regards to her lacking immunity to her own weaponry to your advantage. She may be good at planning and adapting, but she can still be distracted and caught off-guard by sudden unexpected developments

Prone to stomping her foot and throwing herself to the ground and flailing around when things don't go as planned.

If Treat's pupils and irises shrink and she starts shivering, she's entered her "Sugar Rush State". It's a state she enters once she sets her mind to it and consumes a larger amount of candy in a very short time.

In this state, her energy levels have skyrocketed; She moves at her absolute fastest and hits like a runaway truck.
However, she's very much like a cornered animal - At her most dangerous, but also on the ropes.

She only enters this "Sugar Rush State" if she's at her wit's end and can't see herself winning any other way. That is because she can only maintain it for 20 seconds lest she refuels, and even then, it'll only last for another 20 seconds.
After that, her energy levels take a nosedive and plummet to the point where she can barely stay conscious.
